FEATURES

My Wiltshire: Caroline Hole-Jones

The founder of food, hospitality and public affairs agency, Canny Group has lived in the county for 35 years.

We shall never forget

Geraldine Faulkner talks to a selection of Wiltshire Life readers who share their memories of that remarkable day in 1945 when Victory in Europe was declared.

Engraving the chalk downs of Albion

Geraldine Faulkner pays a visit to Howard Phipps to learn more about his art.

We meet: Karen Scott-Barrett

Karen Scott-Barrett inherited her love of horses from her family. Georgie Green talks to her about royal influence and realising a dream to represent Team GB.

Hare today, but gone tomorrow

Geraldine Faulkner visits Joanna May in her Devizes gallery to find out more about her art and the intriguing treasure hunt book she has recently published.

Saving the rare county flower of Wiltshire

Morag Walker finds out about efforts to conserve this iconic wild orchid.

A life on the river is just right

Claire Pitcher meets a couple who love living on the Kennet and Avon canal.

Solo adventurer treks to the South Pole

In the March 2019 issue we met with Wendy Searle as she trained for her South Pole challenge. Francesca Tyer catches up with her to find out how it went.

Village life: Along the B3098, Bratton, Edington, Coulston

Neil Henty visits three villages on the edge of Salisbury Plain.

Imber: When your country comes calling

Michael Marshman concludes his series locating the lost villages of Wiltshire by exploring the story of probably the most famous of them all.

An end will always mark a beginning

To mark the 75th anniversary of VE Day, Chris Coles begins a three-part series on what life was like in Wiltshire following the cessation of hostilities in Europe.

Turning your dreams into products

Product designer Alastair Swanwick has spent 20 years bringing inventors' ideas to life, he tells Gary Lawrence why he loves the creativity of the British.

Fabulous foxgloves

Jane Gifford visits Terry and Mary Baker at The Botanic Nursery in Atworth.

Down your way: Swindon

Issues that matter: Picking up the pieces

Gary Lawrence spent time at a vital contact centre in Swindon where estranged parents can enjoy a few cherished moments with their youngsters.
